Then he went to Arizona, where he made the acquaintance of Jessie Padgham, the daughter of a prominent and wealthy resident of Pomone, California. The girt was traveling through Arizona with her parents when she met Pasmore, who was annosome, well dressed and a thorough man of the world. She was seventeen, and it is not remarkable that she found his company agreeable, and wound up by falling in love with him. The father made effort to save her, but she was apparently WANTED-A POSITION AS WATCHMAN THOROUGHLY INPATUATED WITH HIM,

We are going to beg our daughter to come home with us, to be a goosi girl and to try to enjoy life as we used to do before this man came in to rob us of all that was dear in life."

Mr. and Mrs. Padgham have arrived here, and are at the kinutsford. Their daughter is with them, and it is to be honed that their counsels will prevail.

Mr. Padgman is about 55 years of age, and it is evident from his appearance that this trouble has weighed heavily upon him. A Hexard reporter called at the hotel last evening, but the gentleman was tired and worn out, and therefore excused himself from being interviewed.
